Vimy Banquet Enjoyed By Ex-Service Men and Women

The Vimy Banquet sponsored by the Irma Branch, No. 112, Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., for all ex-service men and women of Irma and district in Comrade Hedley's hall last Friday night, was conceded a great success and a good gathering sat down to a splendid supper and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all.

Comrade C. R. Jackman, our very able president, acted as Toastmaster and called for a toast to the King, afterwards speaking on the aims and objects of the Legion.

Comrade R. C. McFarland called for a Toast to our Visitors, which was replied to by Comrade A. Whiddon, of Jarow.

A few remarks were made by the following comrades: vice-President N. S. Johnson, A. R. Harper, W. Steele, J. Hedley and L. M. Roberts.

Mrs. C. R. Jackman, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, also made a few remarks regarding their work.

Disappointment was expressed that several of the comrades from Wainwright who had intended to be present, were unable to do so on account of the bad roads.

Our branch extends a very hearty vote of thanks to the Irma Ladies Aid for the splendid repast provided by them.

A dance followed in Kiefer's hall which was well attended. Lunch was served by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Everyone enjoyed themselves and am sure none were disappointed with the evening despite some of the bad roads which they had to travel.

SPORT PEEPS

The city of Edmonton turned out in gala attire on Saturday night to welcome home their wonderful hockey boys the E. A. Cs. Those few Viking who chanced to be in the city report the demonstration as simply grand. While they did not win the Dominion title, their series of victories entitle them to receive honors.

Coach Carrigan produced a smooth-running machine. And there again comes the question, "Is the coach" like Percy Page, most of the team?"

Those famous Grads went out to Vancouver in quest of the title for Western Canada. For the thirteenth time they won this championship. The second game of the series produced a real battle, for the coast girls were seven points up in mid game. The score was 35-30 indicating the ability of the salt-water females in handling the pigskin. With only five points as the margin of victory, the Grads met a truly great team.

The suicide of Satoh, the Japanese tennis star, is a real calamity. He was the mainstay of the Davis Cup team. Through illness he wished to remain at home, but was pressed to accompany the group on their foreign invasion. The directors of the Association have resigned as a result of the feeling against them.

"Do you take this woman until death do part?" asked a minister at a wedding ceremony at Holden. "Don't I get any time off for good behavior?" asked the groom.

JARROW JOTTINGS

Miss Reta Bothwell spent the Easter holidays at her home in Islay.

The Ladies Aid of the United church met at the home of Mrs. B. Matthews, on Wednesday, April 4th. The social hour, which followed the business, took the form of a fare, well to one our most esteemed members, Mrs. Jessie McCracken, who is leaving Jarow. Sincere regret is felt at losing Mrs. McCracken, who for many years has been an earnest and faithful worker in all the organizations in connection with the town, as well as an untiring worker in the United church. For some years she held the office of Ladies Aid president, was a leader of the girls group, a teacher in the Sunday school, and a member of the church board.

Mrs. W. Johnson has purchased the house of Mrs. McCracken and the same is being moved to Irma by Harry Meakin.

Mr. and Mrs. Marby and daughter, Veda, were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Marby, during the Easter holidays.

Rev. and Mrs. Geeson, of Irma, were callers at the Manse on Thursday.

Mrs. G. Cowley went to Edmonton last week to attend the Provincial Conference of the Girl Guides.

Mr. Wallace, block man, for Daysland is in town for a few days, looking after business interests of his company.

An auction sale of the household goods of Mrs. McCracken was held last Saturday. It was reported quite satisfactory.

Mr. F. L. Boris is leaving the farm near Jarow and expects to work on a farm near Irma.

Beef Cattle and Canadian Coarse Grains

In the feeding and management of beef cattle, particularly in times of low beef prices, one of the main objectives is to make the maximum use of inexpensive home-grown feeds and pastures.

Canadian grown barley, oats, wheat and corn are excellent feeds for beef cattle. Barley is probably the most important of these grains. It is widely grown in Canada, is an excellent fattening feed and produces beef of a high quality with fat of a nice white color. In feeding trials conducted both in Canada and the United States, barley has been shown to be practically the equal of corn in the beef ration.

Oats have a tendency to produce growth rather than to fatten beef rapidly. This is due to the fact that they are higher in fibre, bulkier, and richer in protein than barley or corn. A combination of oats and barley is ideal for young cattle or for steers just starting on grain feed. At first the percentage of the two can be about equal but as the steers approach finish the proportion of barley should be raised.

Wheat is best when fed in a mixture. In fact a mixture of the grains, is best at all times. Although wheat is usually too high in price to be economical its feeding value is as high as barley or corn and it can be fed up to thirty-five per cent of the grain ration.

Although corn is produced only to a limited extent in Canada, it is good beef cattle feed and when available should be included in the ration. Many feeding experiments have indicated that a variety of grains and roughages produce the best results. The grain mixture should be supplemented with protein feeds such as linseed oilmeal, ground flaxseed, etc., when the quality of hay is inferior.

Good pastures alone will carry all classes of beef cattle except those being given a high degree of finish for market. It is advisable in finishing beef on pasture, to feed some grain if the cattle are of sufficiently good quality to warrant the extra cost. Experiments have shown that cattle finished on grass with grain, as compared to those finished on grass alone have a distinctly higher dressing percentage and yield better finished, more attractive carcasses which command the highest price. Fewer cattle more highly finished by the use of Canadian coarse grains will go a long way to solving the question of higher prices and greater returns.

Mr. Farmer: "How Is Your Seed?"

That is the pertinent question asked by F. M. MacIsaac, Dominion Experimental Station, Scott, Sask.

Over fifteen hundred samples of wheat taken from farmers' wagon loads as hauled to country elevators have been tested for purity at the Dominion Experimental Station, Scott, during the past three years. Results reveal that twenty-five per cent of the samples were pure enough to be used as seed and that there was at least some good seed of suitable variety in most districts.

An examination of the plots on which tests were made disclosed some facts worthy of mention. To the farmer, the nature of the contrast between the impurity and the main variety is very important in maintaining purity. This was amply demonstrated in the tests. Several combinations of crops were surprised to hear of impurities in their grain, the chief reason being the failure of the farmer to recognize the difference between the impurity and the main variety. It was found that the longer a variety was in commercial use the more impurities were present. About forty per cent of the samples contained admixtures of off types to the extent that they predominated. While the individual growing inferior seed could in many cases increase his returns by obtaining better seed, it is encouraging to note that the progeny of the seed distributed as registered stock, during the past few years, is of a good type and maintaining its purity well.

Wheat is the principal export product of the prairie provinces and is meeting with keen competition in the world markets, hence every grower should do his part in maintaining a high standard of quality. Since admixture of inferior varieties lowers the quality of wheat it is important to grow only pure seed of recommended varieties.

Plants are completed to test the purity of farmers' seed wheat on a much wider scale than previously conducted.

How to Seed Down Meadow Crop Land

In a northerly region of limited precipitation one of the knottiest cropping problems is how to lay land down to meadow crops, says W. D. Albright, superintendent of the Dominion Experimental Substation at Beaverlodge, Alberta. The practice of seeding with a nurse crop results poorly, since the large-kernelled cereal produces a plant that soon crowds the fine grass or clover seedling, robbing the latter of needed moisture and plant food, so that unless the season be exceptionally favorable it makes a spindling growth. After harvest in late August or in September the weather is often cool, dry and windy, hence autumn growth of the meadow plantlets is much less than in climates with a longer interval before the dormant season. Even if the tender seedlings escape winter's wrath—as nurse-crop seedlings of un inoculated legumes are quite likely to do—they still make tardy progress in the following spring, competing weakly with the native and other weeds that are always lying in wait.

Appreciating this problem, the Dominion Substation at Beaverlodge, Alberta, has concentrated upon it almost from the beginning, seeding thousands of plots by comparative methods during the past sixteen years.

Meadow plots seeded alone and hand-weeded in the initial season failed in the ensuing season seldom failed to return to two to four times as much hay as nurse-crop seedings, although it must be conceded that the difference in hay tonnage seldom equals the weight of the nurse crop. On the other hand, nurse-crop seedings sometimes fail outright and are often weedy. Non-nurse-crop seedings left untouched produce prolific crops of weed seeds in the initial season.

To get around the expense of hand-weeding the plan was tried of seeding alone during May or June, pasturing closely, whenever the ground was firm enough, until early August in order to keep annual weeds down and then taking the stock off completely to permit the young stand to form a good top for winter protection. Areas thus treated, while falling short of the yields of hand-weeded plots, have turned reasonably good crops of comparatively clean hay. The plan could not be expected to work on stink-weed areas and it remains to be seen how it may work out in a rotation where seeding is repeatedly done in this way. Thus far it has been fairly successful in the control of edible weeds like lam's quarters, buckwheat and shepherd's purse. The pasturing must, however, be judiciously supervised, concludes the superintendent.

OCCASIONAL WIFE

by EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

Author of "Joretta," "Lipstick Girl" Etc.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to provide for her. Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money when she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Warth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarrelled. At a party at an exclusive club Peter entertains Camilla's guests with impersonations. When the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the party, Peter and Camilla slip off to the beach by themselves and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This makes it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Bowman and Weeks, an advertising agency, where Camilla has submitted some of her work, send for her and tell her they have a new account which requires unusual treatment of juvenile art. The critics were enthusiastic about her work, and Mr. Weeks offers her a salary of $50.00 a week to start and a prospect of having it doubled. She tells Peter of her good fortune in securing employment. Mrs. Hoyt is also informed that Camilla has obtained work and is going to leave the Hoyt household. Avis Werth rents a studio on the same floor as Peter, and invites him to have lunch there. He accepts reluctantly, but is favorably impressed with his visit.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXXVII

"All that has nothing to do with your problem, Peter," Camilla changed the subject abruptly. "Right now, what you need isn't more work, but more time and freedom from anxiety. I can take care of both of us now, and I am going to do it until you get established in your own work."

Peter rose hastily to his feet, almost upsetting Camilla with his sudden movement.

wrong. There's nothing in the world I despise and dread more than living on the income of a wife who is more successful than her husband. I won't do that, even if I never do any better than I am now."

He had to stop for breath. But even that trade did not anger Camilla. It only hurt her cruelly, caused little shivers of pain to tremble through her, radiating from her heart, where a great heavy hurt throbbed and ached.

"But you are doing splendidly, dear Peter. It is just that your work takes more time to develop. You really are doing so much more than I am, and it will be worth much more in the end, too. But you can't starve while you wait for the results!"

"I won't starve. I never have. And don't offer me your charity!"

"Why, Peter," she pleaded, "I was not offering you anything. What I have, is yours. And if anything I have can help with your future, I am doing it just as much for myself as for you, don't you see? Can't I invest my money in our future?"

"No, I don't see it that way and never will. You refused to let me take care of you and now you expect me to depend on you."

"But that's different. If you had to take care of me, it would hurt your work. I can help you because of my work."

"Which is exactly the whole thing. You don't need to remind me of it," Camilla sighed helplessly. Words were useless in Peter's present mood. She never had seen him like that, and didn't know what to say or do.

Presently, she got up from her chair swiftly and went over to put her arms around him and rest against him like a hurt, bewildered child.

"All right, darling. Let's not talk about it any more. I'm sorry—I suggested—anything. I want you to do whatever makes you happy."

"Happy?" he scoffed. She drew back and looked up into his face quickly. His eyes wavered and turned aside without meeting hers, stubbornly. In her arms, she felt his big body rigid, unyielding, and he seemed to try to draw away from her. Camilla's thoughts floundered desperately, but she could think of nothing to say. She just dropped her head on his broad, lined, covered breast and tightened her arms around him. His arms hung listlessly at his sides, as if he were powerless to move them.

Finally, she said softly, without looking up at him, "Peter, don't you love me?"

He moved impatiently and drew away from her. "Of course, you know I do. That only makes it worse."

It was as if he had plunged a knife into her breast before, and now he gave it a quick twist to increase her pain.

"Makes what worse?" she asked weakly.

"Why, if I didn't love you and had no pride—that is, if I hadn't the two greatest things in life—I would think it was pretty soft to have a wife who could make enough for both of us, as some fellows do."

"I think you are making a mountain out of a sand pile," her own resentment began to rise, "but I have told you I would say no more about it. Forget it, and let's go out for dinner somewhere."

"What with? I can't buy dinner for two with fifty cents. I get paid tomorrow, but that doesn't help me today. Besides, I owe most of what is coming to me."

She would have said, blithely, had they not just quarrelled over that very thing. "Well, come along. I have money," but she dared not venture that suggestion now. Or she might have proposed that they go back to her apartment and have dinner. There was plenty of food in the little feeble refrigerator. But that would be like pouring hot oil on his wounds of false pride.

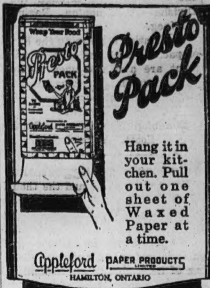

But was it false pride, she asked herself anxiously, and had to admit that it was not, to a certain extent. She was proud of Peter—that he possessed such pride, even if he did exaggerate its maintenance under these particular circumstances.

Little Helms For This Week

"Thou shalt be steadfast and shall not fear, because thou shalt forget thy misery, and remember it as waters that pass away." Job 11:15-16.

In the bitter waves of woe, Beaten and tossed about, By the sudden winds that blow From the desolate shores of doubt, Where the anchors that faith has cast Are dragging in the gale, I am quietly holding fast To the things that cannot fail.—Washington Gladden.

In the darkest hour through which a human soul can pass, whatever else is doubtful, this at least is certain. If there be no God and no future state, even then it is better to be generous than selfish, better to be true than false, better to be brave than to be a coward. Blessed beyond all earthly blessedness is the man, who in the tempestuous darkness of his soul has dared to hold fast to these venerable landmarks. Thrice blessed is he, who when all is cheerless within and without, has obstinately clung to moral good. Thrice blessed because his night shall pass into clear bright day.—F. W. Robertson.

New Regulations For Receiving Gold Bullion

Origin Must Be Readily Recognized At Royal Mint

An effort to further discourage the melting down of gold coins which are legal tender in Canada is made by the minister of finance in the new regulations for the receipt of gold bullion at the royal mint, Ottawa.

In future old jewelry and dental scrap will not be purchased if it has been melted or otherwise treated in such a way as to prevent its origin being readily recognized. It is unlawful to melt down gold coins which are legal tender in Canada and this regulation will make it impossible for any person to benefit by breaking the law since the gold cannot be legally exported.

Bars Jazz On Sundays

Strict Regulations Of Chief Constable Of Northampton, England

Jazz and dance music must not be played in Northampton houses on Sundays. This pious prohibition was made by the Chief Constable of Northampton in England.

He does not object, however, to classical music or to wireless, provided that radio loud-speakers are not so loud as to be heard by passers-by.

The playing of all games in public-houses is also prohibited in the town on Sundays, and programmes of all Sunday concerts must be censored by the police several days before the performances.

Modern heating systems are so painfully efficient, they keep a home in January at temperatures that drive one out of town in July.

Develop Sodium Sulphate Deposits

Formation of a unit of the company called the East Crest Mining and Development Company for the handling of sodium sulphate deposits acquired in Saskatchewan was described to shareholders of East Crest Oil Company at their annual meeting in Calgary. Harvey S. Price, president, said at present the company was confining its activities to a local experimental plant.

Miles down by British aircraft last year were much higher than in 1932.

Messrs. Albert and Adolph Lovig have rented Mr. Carbol's garage and intend to operate a service station.

The quarantine has been removed from the Webber family and all hands are going around again as usual.

Signs of spring—Motor car dealers are in town about almost every day demonstrating the 1934 models to prospective buyers.

Mr. Dennis Barber spent the greater part of the Easter holidays visiting friends in Viking.

Mr. L. M. Roberts spent a part of last week in Edmonton.

Mr. Charles De Tro, of Edmonton, spent the Easter holidays at his home here accompanied by his friend, Mr. Orser.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Love and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wilson arrived back in Irma on April 8th. Mr. Love and his son-in-law, Mr. Wilson, will be settling out a large number of bee colonies again this year in order to meet increasing demand for Alberta honey, the finest produced.

Mr. Jack Levitt met with a painful accident this morning (Wednesday) while helping Mr. P. E. Jones brand some cattle. One of the animals kicked Mr. Levitt on the knee.

Dr. Greenberg took the unfortunate man to the Wainwright hospital to X-ray the injured member which appeared to be broken. Mr. Levitt and family were planning to move to Provost where he has a position with the Imperial Oil Co.

While Mr. Fred Paradis, a trapper, living on the Ross Eaton place, east of Irma, was away for medical treatment a short time ago, some person or persons broke into his residence and stole a number of articles. Information was secured which led to placing the blame on two teen age Irma boys. The case, however, was finally settled out of court by restoring one of the articles and each paying six dollars for the goods destroyed. It is regrettable that the foregoing incident happen and will no doubt serve as a warning to all boys not to meddle with other people's property. However, we feel sure it will not happen again.

In the open prairie districts such as Scott, satisfactory honey production depends largely upon access to sweet clover as there is usually a shortage of other nectar producing flowers. Unfortunately, sweet clover to be used for hay should be cut in the early blossom stage which means that the nectar must come from sweet clover left for seed or used for pasture. However, where native trees grow in abundance, there are usually sufficient wild flowers to ensure a reasonable flow of honey.

To facilitate the control of bee diseases, every beekeeper is expected to register with the Bee Division at the capital of his respective province, and as the diseases are carried in the combs the only way in which bees may be shipped from outside of a province is in package form. Hives and equipment may be readily obtained from mail order houses and the package bees through the Bee Division at Edmonton, Regina, or Winnipeg.

Publication concerning the handling of package bees and general management are available upon request at the Dominion Experimental Station at Scott, Saskatchewan.

Worthwhile Suggestions

Spring is with us and the thoughts of all households, especially housewives, turn to the job of cleaning up for the coming summer season. Many of the jobs about the house or in the gardens and grounds require the hiring of help. There are a number of men and women, too, who would be glad to assist you if you would only make enquires. These men and women perhaps have had a difficult time in getting through the winter owing to scarcity of employment and would appreciate a few days' work.

In your needs do not overlook local help or merchants—look after your own townpeople first of all. A few hundred dollars spent in local channels at this time of the year would mean a great deal to the town as a whole, as it would put more money in circulation, and a dollar spent at home is bound to help you as well as the recipient. The latter immediately puts it back into circulation, and as the dollar passes from hand to hand it will eventually reach yours once more.

Here are a few suggestions that might help out. Many more will come to your mind.

Outside painting of the house, railings, etc.

Inside painting of the house.

New shop front, or existing one repainted.

Extra shelves put in the kitchen. Cupboards built.

Rooms redecorated.

Garage built—or even a tool shed. Those alterations which have been put off for months.

Have the window sashes overhauled, and renewed where necessary. The kitchen re-colored and painted. Roof examined and repaired.

Garage windows repaired or replaced.

Lay a new floor in the garage. Have the car repainted.

New garden path, in gravel or cement.

New rockery made in garden. Lawn levelled and returned.

Garden dug over and planted, paths, weeds and repaired, hedges trimmed, trees topped, etc.

Shop signs and names re-written or renovated.

Furniture renovated and repaired. Buy that extra arm chair or bed that would add to convenience and comfort.

Carpets taken up, beaten and re-laid.

Shabby curtains and coverings dyed or cleaned.

Clocks cleaned and repaired.

Electricity installed, or extra points put in.

Have a new radio pole. Carry radio extensions to other room.

Extra suit, or spring coat. Get piano tuned.

Extra shirts—summer underwear, etc.

Get shoes and boots repaired. Order new boots.

Get new curtains in readiness for spring cleaning.

And new loose covers. Extra tailored coat.

Extra evening dress.

New visiting cards, and personal stationery.

Have all blinds overhauled. Tennis racquets re-strung.

Pictures reframed in fashionable style.

Camera overhauled and reconditioned.

Suits, overcoats, etc., cleaned and pressed.

Loose covers for car seats.

New carpets in car.

Replenish crockery, cutlery, household linen, etc.

New lawn-mower.

Mower, shears and garden implements sharpened.

Bankers and Banking

The bank act is reviewed every ten years, but in this particular case it is eleven years since it was last revised.

This year the revisions are particularly important because of the advent of the Central Bank and for the simple reason that during every time of stress and storm there is a greater and greater tendency to question the infallibility of our bankers, and to search for means to improve the system.

Naturally our proximity to the United States, and the wealth and popularity of that country in comparison with our own, makes us particularly susceptible to American influence. During the past year the American banking system went wrong. The causes of that collapse are somewhat foreign to Canadian conditions—American banking for a long time has been subject to speculative activities from which we hope our own is free—besides there is a tendency in American banking to make loans against fixed assets, land, etc., in a way which is not done in the Dominion of Canada.

Outside of the routine changes in the bank act there are certain other features which will receive consideration this year. One is the existence of interlocking directorates and a very close relationship between banking and industry. The charge is that the banking organizations through their directors are associated with many of the leading industries in the Dominion of Canada and that these industries on that account receive far more care and consideration at the bankers' hands than do other industries which are equally worthy, but are outside such beneficent influences.

For instance, the farmer claims that agriculture is neglected while great industries are helped. The answer of the banks, of course, is that they have gone as far as they can in aiding agriculture until the condition of agriculture improves. It is hardly possible that this answer will be satisfactory to those who feel they suffer from inadequate credit, and there will be very distinct pressure imposed upon the government to bring about some sort of restriction of relationship between banking and industry, thus leaving the banker free to exercise his unfettered judgement in these matters.

One other matter is bound to receive attention. People who follow banking affairs will be astonished this year to find that the banks withdrew from their current reserves almost $30,000,000 which, according to the statement made at the time, was used in order to increase or replenish "inner reserves."

Now apparently few people knew that banks had "inner reserves." They were under the impression that the statements made by the banks in their annual reports were accurate and correct. They were astonished to find that the profits recorded from year to year were not an accurate statement of profits and that from time to time certain sums had been laid aside in an inner reserve and that from this inner reserve subsequent losses were paid.

This system has been defended by accountants and by bankers. They say it enables the banks to meet losses without revealing the fact to the public. It would seem also that it enables bankers to make financial statements at the end of the year which do not reveal the truth in regard to their earnings, a rather indefensible thing from the standpoint of a quasi-public institution.

The method admits of certain definite abuses. It would certainly enable bankers to loan money to more or less speculative concerns and then if losses were made these losses could be hidden by recording the loss against the inner reserves of the bank, with perhaps, no one but the general manager and half a dozen others knowing anything about it.

Semi-public institutions have an obligation to the public as well as to their stockholders, and one of the first obligations should be that the statements issued record the facts of the business.

On the other hand a certain difficulty is presented by the fact that the public is not properly informed in regard to matters of business. If bankers made very large profits in times of prosperity there would be an urgent call upon them to reduce interest rates and no one would consider that it was necessary for them to carry the very heavy reserves which are essential to meet any period of depression.

The only answer to this is that the public must be educated.

The only way in which the public can be educated is by letting them know the truth.

It is often said that it would be highly advisable for governments to levy heavy taxes in periods of prosperity in order to provide reserves for periods of adversity, or at least to enable the government to avoid heavier taxation at these periods. There is soundness in the idea that banks during periods of prosperity should be permitted to build up very substantial reserves so that they might be able to take care of losses during a period of adversity, and that the public should be educated to understand that a decline in the reserves of a bank or even a reduction in its dividend rate does not necessarily imply the collapse of the banking structure, nor anything else except an adjustment to the conditions of the hour. These are questions which will be discussed before the banking committee now in session.

"A scientist says that every atom in the human body is renewed every seven years," remarked one of our citizens to his wife, "and if that's the case I'm not the same man you married." "I've been suspecting that for some time," she replied.

"Say," said a Bruce fellow to a girl at the Holden dance when he led her to a seat after a waltz, "I just love dancing." "Well, you're not too old to learn," she replied.

Something to worry about—It takes 2,100 pounds of foodstuffs per year to feed the average person.

Heard at the poker party: "Is your wife entertaining this winter?" "Not very."

Telling modern young people "No," is a good deal like hollering "Whoa" to an automobile, says a careful observer.

"I'm sorry, but I can't pay you this month," said a fellow here when dunned for a bill. "But you said the same thing last month," the creditor complained. "Well I kept my word, didn't I?" was the reply.

"I've bought a beautiful surprise for your birthday," remarked a local lady yesterday to her husband. "I am anxious to see it," he said. "Wait until I put it on," she replied as she pulled her new spring hat out of a handbox.
